Homepage

Entire website is displayed in various tabs.

Left & right columns feature category pages,
center column gathers all entries/posts.

Center column can be scrolled vertically.

Left & right columns have tennis ball shaped buttons to navigate to respective category page. Same buttons for center column, but to navigate to specific entry/post.

Fixed text bar at the bottom, links to e-mail, instagram, newsletter, as well as displaying 15 love motto.

Typography TBC, still playing around.

Archive

Ideally, the archive would display the entirety of the website chronologically as thumbnails for all entries/ posts, which then can be categorized by post type, tag and date.

In a sense, the archive should function as a visual sitemap, as well as offering a simplified categorical format to explore the site.

Single column, organized in thumbnails left->right, top->bottom, vertically scrollable.

News

News page functions as blog posts, relating to any which topic.

Two left-aligned columns. First left column lists different entries/posts, vertical scroll. Second left column displays entries/posts in odd sized formats, horizontal scroll.

Clicking on a post on either column leads to same layout, specific post, vertical scroll.

We have previously talked about difficulties relating to odd sizes/horizontal scroll, will be updated after feedback.

Releases/Events

The idea is the same as News page, without odd sizes.

The horizontal scroll is divided in identical blocks, displaying relevant information from each post.

For releases, this is the album cover, catalogue info, and the following copy, as much as can fit. Clicking on a post leads to a page with more information.

For events, this is the event visual and the following copy, as much as can fit. Clicking on a post leads to a page with more information.
